City ponders bonds to fund Vaughn library rebuild

Fees would add $71 a year to $100K property's taxes

The city of Ashland could borrow money to fund renovations to the Vaughn Public Library.

The library needs about $4 million in repairs and upgrades, according to city studies. And while City Council members support the renovations, they have not found any way to pay for them.

The city this week contemplated borrowing money via a 20-year bond issue. It would sell bonds with a 4% interest rate that it would repay to investors over two decades.

All four eggs laid by the falcons nesting at the Ashland power plant have hatched and are scheduled to be banded and named June 22.

Lynn Hall, an environmental analyst for Xcel plants across northern Wisconsin, is local caretaker for the peregrine falcon nesting box atop the power plant. She began checking the box in late May, when the eggs were due to hatch.
