

PET OF THE WEEK

If you love torbies and their confident personalities, I'm the cat for you! I'm a spayed female who was recently rescued from the cold outdoors and am enjoying greeting everyone as they visit the rescue.

As soon as you sit down, I'll wander over to cuddle with you or perch on your shoulders despite my adult size. I'd probably like a house without another cat friend so I can have you all to myself.

Pet of the Week highlights an animal available at the Helping PAWS shelter in Washburn. To learn more about PAWS or view other pets available, visit helpingpaws.wi.org.

Ashland jail administrator cited in 3 a.m. crash

ASHLAND DAILY PRESS

Ashland County's jail administrator was issued two citations after he crashed his truck into a ditch at about 3 a.m. April 16 and officers found a can of White Claw at the scene.

Police were called to the crash along Mountain Road in the Bayfield County town of Bell when the administrator, Kyle Cadotte, phoned 911 to say his truck slid into the ditch and he was trying to get to his home about a mile away.

A Bayfield County deputy who arrived at the scene said in a report that Cadotte's pickup truck went off the road, ran over a mailbox, jumped over a driveway and came to a stop in the ditch. The crash was so violent that airbags in the truck were deployed.

Outside the truck, the deputy found a can of White Claw, a seltzer-like alcoholic beverage, the report says. The deputy suspected alcohol was a factor in the crash, but Cadotte never was given sobriety tests, the report says.

While the deputy was at the wreck, a man drove up and identified himself as Carl Cadotte, the father of the driver, Kyle. He said Kyle Cadotte had phoned and asked him to check on the truck.

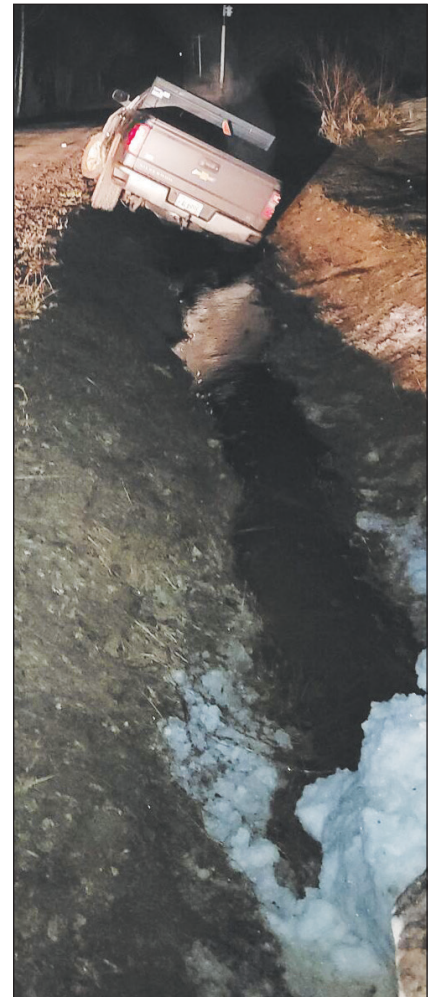

The deputy then phoned Kyle Cadotte seeking more information, the report said, and Cadotte said he had been distracted by his phone when he crashed.

"I asked him if he would be willing to meet with me so we could discuss what happened in person and he said no," the deputy's report says.

"I asked him several more times if he would be willing to meet me and he said no," the report goes on. "I asked Kyle if he had been drinking and he said no."

Cadotte never met with the deputy and never was required to perform sobriety tests, according to the report. The deputy, Richard Laakonen, never went to Cadotte's home in Washburn and mailed Cadotte speeding and inattentive driving citations.

Cadotte, who had been an Ashland County deputy, was appointed as top administrator of the Ashland County Jail shortly after Sheriff Brian Zupke took office and fired then-administrator Lt. Kim Lavasseur in January.

Lavasseur has argued that Zupke fired her and appointed Cadotte in part because Cadotte is a relative of Zupke's.

Zupke on Friday did not return calls seeking comment on Cadotte's job status or whether he remained jail administrator.

Lavasseur is fighting the county's action against her.
