

Nov 23

2022

Page 0001

Clip resized 62%

Press welcomes Stephanie Dayton as reporter

By JoDee Brooke

Neillsville native Stephanie Dayton has joined the Clark County Press staff as a reporter. Dayton was born and raised in Neillsville and graduated from Neillsville High School.

"I started writing the second I learned how, and I never stopped," shared Dayton. "In fourth grade, I used to get the kids National Geographic magazines and I would write research papers on them for fun."

Dayton began sharing Clark County news just last week and will cover local events and county, city and municipal news.

"As an adolescent, I began writing short stories and poetry," explained Dayton.

"I love writing about everything from essays to research to current events and fiction. It's hard to choose which one I prefer. In high school, I would take extra English classes as electives just to get the chance to write more. In college, I took many creative writing classes and even learned how to write sheet music, not that I remember much of that now."

Dayton lives in Neillsville with her five-year-old daughter and three-year-old son. In addition to writing, she enjoys photography and reading.

"I am very excited to be joining the team," shared Dayton.

Contributed photo

The Clark County Press welcomes Stephanie Dayton as its new reporter. Dayton, a Neillsville native, joined the Press staff earlier this month and will be covering Neillsville and the surrounding Clark County communities events.